This webinar will explore common behavioral symptoms that occur in dementia, such as agitation, personality changes, and delusions and hallucinations. Family caregivers will learn why these changes happen and how to respond in ways that reduce distress for both the person with dementia and themselves.

Dr. Anne D Johnson, MD

Dr. Johnson is an assistant professor in the Duke Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences, specializing in geriatric psychiatry. She completed her psychiatry residencies at Vanderbilt University and the University of North Carolina, followed by a geriatric psychiatry fellowship at Duke.
